Previously I've worked for large international firms and government agencies, as well as run my own business. In light of that experience, I would say that the model Legg Mason has created is extremely well tested and conducive to success: supportive parentage to autonomously-run business units. It's a great opportunity for individuals who want to make a difference.

The most rewarding part of my job is knowing that I am helping our customers achieve their financial goals. Balancing the needs of our clients and portfolio managers has proven to be the most challenging part of the job, especially in today's volatile markets.

One of the great things about working at Legg Mason is that I feel valued as an employee. I can see how the work that I do every day impacts the company and it makes me feel like I am a contributing member of the Legg Mason team.

I've always considered it a fortuitous accident that I ended up in the financial services industry. My colleagues at Bartlett are a very varied group, age wise and in every way. I'm also very proud of the level of community involvement and volunteerism on the part of everyone at Bartlett. Their accomplishments in our area are so numerous, both of their time and funds, that you would think there were at least twice as many of them.

Meeting our clients' needs and expectations is the most rewarding aspect of my job, especially when I can demonstrate that Legg Mason is one of the top asset management companies. Recruiting the most qualified candidates and showing them that Legg Mason is a great company to work for is also very rewarding.
